Tucked into the protected hills of the Calanques National Park, half an hour from Marseille, this estate looks out across the bay to Cap de la Canaille, with the open Mediterranean stretching beyond. A private path winds down to the turquoise waters of the Arène cove in just minutes on foot. Built in the 1870s and once a seaside hotel, said to have welcomed guests such as Winston Churchill and Virginia Woolf, the Provençal residence was fully restored in 2016, weaving period character together with the comfort of today. Around 600 m² of light-filled space unfolds across four sea-facing ...
